Searching in Primo

Primo searches more than just books in the library – it searches our online databases as well. In your results you’ll find print books, ebooks, journal articles, newspaper articles, reference entries, book reviews, and more.

1. Do a simple keyword search by typing your terms in the search bar. This will search for books, media, articles – everything.

2. Or, click on Advanced Search to search specifically by title, author, subject, etc. You can also narrow your search by material type, language, or date range.
3 Explore and refine your results:

Click on a title to see more information, like its location and availability in the library or a link to the text online.

Use these facets to narrow down your results.

The header tells you what kind of resource it is.

Click Available Online for a link to the full-text article.

Note: Clicking Expand My Results will give you more results, but they will include items we don’t have access to, like articles that aren’t available as full text.
